

Included in the sale of the car are two copies of the 2010 publication, Jaguar XK140 Exploded (now out of print) ...one gently used copy and a second bound in green leather with a companion sleeve (unopened – still in the original cellophane).

These books must be seen to be appreciated ... 457 pages with more than 2000 graphic illustration (an invaluable reference in the restoration of the car). See the pages following in example.

As judged from the listing above, the books alone should be valued at more than $5000.

Owing to the printing process used in this publication, the colours are only intended to convey the closest likeness possible to the original colour. These swatches are based on original Jaguar brochures but are only approximate and should not be used as a basis for producing an exact likeness.

XK140s were introduced with a range of 14 standard paint colours as shown above, with the steel-metallic MEDITERRANEAN BLUE being quickly replaced by the similar shade PACIFIC BLUE.

Unlike XK 120s, up until November 1952, metallic paint colours were not available for XK 140s, and were not being reintroduced until release of E-Type in 1961. The seven colours marked 'XK150 Colour' were introduced in January 1957 and were only applied to a small number of Left Hand Drive Open Two Seaters.
